Following an almost unanimous decision by our Members, BOCA is currently merging with Birds Australia, forming a new bigger bird conservation organisation called BirdLife Australia. BirdLife Australia will be launched in 2012 and until then we'll be working closely together as our operations come together.

Through BirdLife Australia we will be able to integrate our conservation, education and members programs to be much more effective over a wider range of activities. The new organisation will be strengthened by having over 10,000 Members and by increasing our presence in all States and Territories. Finally, merging will allow us to save money on administration that can be ploughed back into our core work. In short BirdLife Australia will be more effective and will give you much greater value for your dollar.

By joining BOCA and so joining BirdLife Australia, you will help us ensure we can continue to achieve so much for Australia's birds.
